FROM ROY STONEMAN - T.S.A. PUBLICITY OFFICER:-

Many of us in soccer administration are dismayed and disappointed with the lack of media coverage given to our code. This season has commenced with an all time low in media coverage and I believe that we must exert pressure on all media outlets to get this great game the publicity it deserves.

However the pressures must come from as many varied sources as possible, the loan voice of the Secretary Rodger Marlor is not enough. I appeal to Club Committees, Coaches, players and soccer supporters for your help in two specific areas.

1. Send in copy typed, double spaced to the Mercury, radio and TV stations, (the T.S.A. office can help with office facilities). DO NOT expect every item to be used even the Premier doesn't achieve that.

2. Apply pressure to the media outlets by complaining politely but persistently when you do not hear, see or read enough news about our great game.

I am sure that with your full support in these two vital areas we can look forward to an improved media coverage

T.S.A. SQUAD COACH

Due to other pressures and commitments Brian McKay has had to withdraw as Coach to the T.S.A. Squad. At short notice, the first representative game is on April 23rd against the South Australian State Amateur Squad, David Crossen has accepted the invitation to select and coach a squad. It is hoped that all players selected will give their full support to David Crossen in this, the first representative match of four already scheduled.

**********

THE 1983 SEASON kicked off last Saturday (April 9th) with very few serious problems. All scheduled matches were played despite the flood of last minute registrations which kept the T.S.A. office busy until late Friday evening.
Minor problems encountered - e.g. poor markings at the XRoads, missing corner flags, have, hopefully, been rectified.

Results of all matches were received as required and it appears as though they will be published in the Mercury every Tuesday.

REFEREE'S VIEWPOINT

Jumping at an opponent, Law 12(c) can be considered as kicking or striking. If the Referee is of the opinion that the offence be the player in jumping at his opponent was of such a serious (violent) nature, then the player is sent off under serious foul play.
Intentionally handling of the ball is one of the nine offences listed under Law 12 (i), but no Referee would send a player off (not previously cautioned), for a serious handling offence, although handling the ball by a player, other than a goalkeeper, to prevent a certain goal is most unsportsmanlike.
Serious foul play, therefore, is foul play committed in a serious manner against an opponent. Law 12 (a)-(h) are eight offences all committed AGAINST AN OPPONENT, an important item to observe, and if the ball had been inplay at the time of the offence, the game would be re-started by a direct free kick or a penalty-kick.

For example, if a player strikes, kicks or attempts to strike or kick a Referee, he would be guilty of violent conduct. There is no difference in the degree of actual violence which warrants a player being sent off for striking a Referee. In both cases the player has been guilty of conduct of a violent nature (serious). The difference between these two distinct striking offences is the category under which the player is sent off. Serious foul play if he struck an opponent but violent conduct if the player had struck the Referee, a linesman, a team official, a spectator or even a colleague of his side.
There is also an important difference already stated, in how the game is re-started if the ball is in play at the time the offence was committed on the field; direct free-kick or penalty kick if

FIRST AID - INTERNAL HAEMORRAGE (bleeding)

Bleeding occurs but it is not easily seen on the exterior of the body. It may result from injury or may be due to disease. It may be visible or concealed.

VISIBLE

The Lungs - blood is coughed up and it is bright red and frothy, because it is mixed with air.

The Stomach - the blood is vomited. It is often the colour of coffee grounds, due to the action of the acid of the stomach on it. It can be bright red in colour if the bleeding is severe. It may be mixed with food.

The Upper Bowel - the blood is mixed with the motions and due to the action of the strong digestive juices in this part of the bowel they have a black tarry appearance.

The Lower Bowel - the blood in the motions is a normal colour.

The Kidneys or Bladder - the blood escapes with the urine which is red or smoky in colour.

CONCEALED

Bleeding into the muscles after injury or surrounding fractures.

Bleeding into the abdominal cavity from the liver, spleen or pancreas.

Bleeding into the abdominal cavity from the uterus and tubes in the female.

These bleedings can be very extensive and can lead to severe circulatory collapse.

SIGNS & SYMPTONS

A rapid and weak pulse.
A cold, pale and clammy skin.
Rapid respiration increasing in depth with sighing and yawning.
Restlessness - Thirst.
Consciousness affected causing dizzyness, fainting and collapse.
Pain and tenderness are often more pronounced.

TREATMENT - Absolute rest - seek urgent medical aid.

Next week - First aid for burns.

This series of articles is prepared by Brian Evans.

The T.S.A. is prepared to assist in organising a first aid course - if you are interested 'phone 231717.
